CAMBODIA : SECC officials visit Hanoi to learn about Vietnamese bourse

The Securities and Exchange Commission of Cambodia (SECC), the local bourse regulator, is working with its counterpart in Vietnam to develop the capital market in the Kingdom. Last week, SECC and Ministry of Economy and Finance officials travelled to Hanoi to learn more about the operation of the State Securities Commission of Vietnam. During the visit, officials from both capital market regulators discussed cooperation in several initiatives, according to an official press release. Sou Socheat, SECC director-general and leader of the Cambodian delegation in Hanoi, told Khmer on Monday that last week’s visit was part of a memorandum of understanding between the two institutions signed in 2017. In the MoU, the regulators agreed to share experiences in the development of their capital markets. “In the MoU signed with the Vietnamese bourse regulator, we agreed to assist each other and share our knowledge. The aim is to learn from each other,” he said. Under the cooperation, SECC can train its officials by sending them to Vietnam to learn about that country’s capital market, he added. Mr Socheat noted that SECC has entered similar agreements with the bourse authorities of Korea, China, and Thailand. Similarly, an “exchange letter” has been signed with Japan, he added. (Khmer Times)

CAMBODIA : Container traffic at capital’s port up 30%

State-owned Phnom Penh Autonomous Port saw a significant rise in container traffic during the first seven months of the year. From January to July, the port handled 150,419 twenty-foot equivalent units (TEUs), a 29.5 hike compared to the same seven-month period last year, according to its latest unaudited report filed to the Cambodia Securities Exchange. The publicly listed firm noted that 1,332 cargo ships passed through the port during the seven months, a 12.8% hike. The amount of fuel oil and gas shipped through the port rose to 2.2 million tonnes, a 25% year-on-year increase. The report also shows a significant increase in the number of foreign tourists passing through the port. More than 27,600 foreign tourists boarded or disembarked vessels at PPAP, up 29.7% from the same period last year. PPAP is one of five companies publicly traded in the Kingdom. Last year, the company’s net profit margin rose by more than 39%. (Khmer Times)

CAMBODIA : Kingdom’s 2020 tax revenue collection set to rise once again

Cambodia's 2020 tax revenues are expected to continue to grow, while transparency is also set to improve as tax officials become more aware of anti-corruption laws, according to the director general of the General Department of Taxation (GDT) on Monday. Speaking to tax officials at a workshop in the capital on the Anti-Corruption Law, Kong Vibol said that strengthening legal enforcement and the use of technology in tax collection is set to further push Cambodia’s tax revenue growth, especially when a new technological system becomes fully operational in 2020. “Understanding the anti-corruption law is very important for tax officials. Today, we are working hard on tax reform, especially strengthening good governance, transparency in paying tax and creating a fair playing field,” he said. “By strengthening the tax laws, code of ethics, procedures and the anti-corruption law, I believe it will put the tax officials in a more responsible position.” According to Vibol, corruption in the tax sector has been a challenge in the past, as some officials received under-the-table fees from taxpayers or negotiated fees outside the system, making it difficult to audit. (Phnom Penh Post)

CAMBODIA : Ministry urges SMEs to join CSX

The government has called on local small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) to list on the stock exchange as a way of enhancing access to funding and enabling expansion. Hong Sokong, secretary of state at the Ministry of Industry and Handicrafts, said limited access to finance remains one of the top challenges for Cambodian SMEs and urged them to join the Cambodia Securities Exchange (CSX). “By doing so they will be able to stay competitive as they will gain access to new sources of finance to allow them to expand. “However, to become a publicly listed company, they first must formalise. They must register with the government and ensure they follow standard accounting practices,” Mr Kong said during a forum on the agri-processing business held Friday. As outlined in the country’s Industrial Development Policy 2015-2025, the government’s goal is to have at least 80 percent of SMEs officially registered by 2025. At least 50% of those firms must follow proper accounting and bookkeeping standards. “This target is simplistic but important as proper bookkeeping offers a window into a business’ situation and provides accountability to shareholders. Firms that keep their accounting books up-to-date will also receive support and incentives from the government, including training and technical assistance,” the country’s Industrial Development Policy says. (Khmer Times)

CAMBODIA : Singaporean company plans to build smart city in Cambodia

Limestone Network, a Singaporean startup, is planning to build a smart city in the heart of Phnom Penh. International startup media platforms reported this week that Limestone Network is seeking to transform the face of Southeast Asia by building smart cities powered by blockchain technology. Limestone Network was founded in December last year by Singapore entrepreneur Eddie Lee, who is also the vice president of Singapore FinTech Association (SFA). According to Tech in Asia, the beginning of this undertaking will involve the construction of a 100-hectare mixed-use development project in the centre of Cambodia’s capital city. The project will include residential homes, office buildings, shopping malls, retail outlets, schools, and a gigantic convention centre, attracting 10,000 businesses and close to 200,000 people. All residents and workers will be provided a ‘digital passport’ that will allow them full access to all the features of the Limestone app after thorough verification. Among other things, holders of the digital passports will be able to make digital purchases and move from building to building within the smart city. (Khmer Times)

CHINA : STAR Market to gain global focus

Potentially handsome returns from fast-growing Chinese tech start-ups are likely to attract high foreign participation on Shanghai’s Nasdaq-like STAR Market, after the market develops with a larger size and lower volatility, analysts from home and abroad said. China’s sci-tech innovation board, or the STAR Market, on the Shanghai Stock Exchange has received continuing interest from investors since it debuted on July 22, with ample liquidity and relatively strong stock price performance. On Wednesday, 22% of the shares of STAR-listed firms changed hands on average, much higher than the 2.7% for the whole A-share market. Also, since the first batch of 25 STAR-listed firms debuted, their share prices had gained 6.4% on average as of Wednesday, versus a 1.5% loss for the benchmark Shanghai Composite Index over the same period. The STAR Market, however, has seen limited participation from foreign investors, despite their notable presence on the main board, analysts said. Tommie Fang, head of China equities at UBS, said the majority of foreign institutional investors still have a wait-and-see attitude toward the new board, pending declines in valuation levels and steadier market conditions. (CHINA DAILY)

SOUTH KOREA : South Korea to spend $3.9B on economy

The government will spend 4.7 trillion won ($3.89 billion) next year to support the development of future industries as part of its effort to revitalise South Korea’s sluggish economy, the finance minister said on Wednesday. At a ministerial meeting held in Seoul, Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Hong Nam-ki said the government will invest 3 trillion won in system semiconductors, bio-health and future mobility. The remaining 1.7 trillion won is to be set aside for data, fifth-generation network services and artificial intelligence, he said, stressing that the investment is meant to promote the growth of innovative industries and for such growth momentum to proliferate. “The planned investment in core infrastructure and new industries is planned to help innovative growth spill over into other industrial sectors,” said Hong, who is also deputy prime minister for economic affairs.

The two-phase plan starts with expanding infrastructure for data, the 5G network and AI. To build a foundation for innovative growth, the government will provide vouchers for small and medium-sized companies wanting to purchase AI solutions and run projects such as building digital twins of aging facilities to nurture growth of the 5G network market. (THE KOREA HERALD)
